Open Government for Sacramento County

We want transparency in how government operates and how tax dollars are spent.

Using the internet we want to follow the money at all levels of government from local boards to the Board of Supervisors.

In the coming months members of Republicans of River City will review county government web sites to see how they share information with the public and grade them based on the criteria of how fast and easy it is to navigate websites, access information and follow tax dollars.

If you would like to help in this project let us know.

ROGER NIELLO NAMED NEW HEAD OF SACRAMENTO METRO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

By Carl Burton

Accepting the job as President and CEO of the Chamber brings Roger back full circle. He served as the president of the Sacramento Metro Chamber in 1995.

With the backing of Republicans of River City (the first republican organization to back him for public office) Roger was elected to the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors, District 4, in February 1999 and he also served in the state Legislature from 2004 to 2010. Roger was well known for working across party lines in the state legislature to get things accomplished.

Roger will take office on January 1, 2012. Once on the job, Roger says his first priority is to get familiar and comfortable with the internal operations of the organization. That includes the chamber's employees and volunteer leadership, but it also includes the membership and other partner organizations. "I will connect or reconnect with many partner organizations, chambers, business and elected leaders around the region. They will hear from me and they will hear me talking about regional collaboration."

"The chamber is much stronger now than it was in '95 in all respects," Roger said, adding that he wants to draw more job diversity to the region.

"Government jobs are good, but the percentage we have here is too high, and bringing in more jobs relying on government subsidies, like some of the green industry, isn't the answer. We need to bring those in, yes, but we also need to grow our smaller businesses, because that's where wealth comes from."

As the former Chairman of San Joaquin County Economical Development Association and president of its job creation program, Carl said "I look forward to working with Roger in his new position and I will urge the membership of Republicans of River City to renew their memberships in the Chamber."

NO-BRAINIER

By Carl Burton

Voter ID? What's the big deal about showing your showing voter ID? When I visit my doctors office I have to show my photo ID. When I board a plane I show my photo ID. When I go shopping I show my photo ID if I want to use a credit card.

So why shouldn't I (we) show photo ID when we go to the polls to vote?

NOVEMBER 8 ELECTION RETURNS

By Carl Burton

President Obama suffered a voter backlash as Ohio voters turned out in force to support a ballot issue that would "bar any legislation requiring Ohioans to buy health insurance" — a direct shot at the Obama federal health care overhaul. The Ohio initiative to stop Obama Health Care Plan is another sign of just how unpopular the mandate is. Democrats in their slate mailer urged voters to vote against the initiative but as I write this report 66 percent of the voters supported the initiative to stop the federal takeover of health insurance.

Ohio voters handed Gov. John R. Kasich (Republican) a serious setback when they defeated his effort to weaken collective bargaining for public employees. The vote was 61 percent to 39 percent vote to repeal a bill support by the governor. A word to the wise who might be contemplating this legislation in California: the big mistake made by Gov. Kasich was to include police and fire fighters in the overall legislation.

In Maine voters rejected a law that was passed by the legislature that ended same-day voter registration.

Things turned out differently in Mississippi which became the seventh state to adopt voter ID legislation this year, and the first to do so through a ballot initiative. At the same time Mississippi voters rejected an anti-abortion constitutional amendment that would have outlawed all abortions and many forms of contraception.

In Virginia where the results are still not certain Republicans may have achieved a tie in the state Senate with 20-20. In the House of Delegates Republicans increased their majority to 66 seats to the Democrats' 32. If the Republicans win the Senate seat it will be only the second time in the history of Virginia that all branches of government will be controlled by Republicans.

Kentucky's Democratic Governor Steve Beshear won re-election.

Arizona Republican Senate leader Russell Pearce who led lawmakers in passing an immigration law in 2010 that sparked national boycotts and was emulated by Georgia, Alabama and other states was recalled by the voters.

My analysis is that voters around the country are restless and many incumbents of both parties won easy reelection.

If the Republicans are to make gains in 2012 much will depend on who the choice is at the top of the Republican ticket. I do think that the Presidential candidate could have coattails in a number of states.

Right now I believe President Obama will carry California and we could lose more seats in the California state legislature and even some Congressional seats unless the Republican Party supports candidates who match the districts in which they run and do not opt for purity.
